State adopts strict standards

By JAYNE W. MILLER

WILMINGTON - A few changes are on the menu for Wilmington school lunches now that state health officials have approved strict new nutrition standards this month. Most children in Wilmington, however, will not see a big change as the town is well positioned to absorb the new standards.

"We didn't wait for them to tell us any of this. Any food service director paying attention for the last ten years knew this was coming," Mary Palen, Wilmington's Food Service Director, told the Crier.

Wilmington began making changes to lunch options even prior to Palen's tenure, beginning with lowering the fat content in desserts. Palen has continued the practice, bringing in whole grains and plentiful fruits and vegetables. In fact, students regularly have whole-wheat crust on their pizzas (though not the

Public hearing may be held in fall

By JAYNE W. MILLER

WILMINGTON - The troublesome intersection of Glen Road, Wildwood Street, and Middlesex Avenue begins to make some headway after more than two years without much action, now that the Massachusetts Department of Transportation has reviewed the signaling information.

"We are finally starting to make some progress again," said DPW Superintendent Donald Onusseit, the Massachusetts Department of Transportation has reviewed the application recently and he anticipates the state will host a public hearing sometime this fall.

"We've had it ready for close to three years, but we're looking to receive money from the state Transportation Improvement Program (TIP) which uses state funds on local improvement projects. There are plenty of projects they [the state] are focused on," Onusseit told the Crier.

Onusseit anticipates a public hearing hosted by the state agency will take place in the autumn, though he acknowl-

Probe investigates death of Wilmington Soldier in Alaska

By JAYNE W. MILLER

WILMINGTON - As this town mourns the loss of a courageous son, the U.S. Army's Criminal Investigation Detachment pursues a probe into the death of Army Specialist Christopher Robert Crosby, age 23.

The Army said in a statement that Crosby was found deceased by two non-commissioned officers in his barracks room Monday, July 18 after he failed to appear for morning physical training routines at Ft. Richardson in Alaska.

The Anchorage Daily News reported that the Army said he died of a gunshot wound.

Crosby, a paratrooper, was assigned to the 1st Battalion, 501st Infantry Regiment, 4th Airborne Brigade Combat Team, 25th Infantry Division at Joint Base Elmendorf-Richardson in Alaska. Crosby joined the Army in 2008, completed Basic and Advanced Individual Training, and Airborne training at Fort Benning, GA before arriving at Fort Bragg, N.C. in October 2008. He was stationed at Fort Bragg from October 2008 to March 2011. He arrived at Joint Base Elmendorf-Richardson last March.

"I cannot comment due to the ongoing investigation," Army spokesperson Chuck Canterbury told the Crier.

A memorial ceremony was held last Thursday at 1:30

WMS goes to Washington

Middle School students treated to exclusive after-hours tour of White House

WASHINGTON, DC - The Wilmington Middle School traveled to Washington D.C. from June 7 - June 10 for its annual school trip. This year, 281 students attended making this the largest group in Wilmington Middle School history. Students spent an incredibly busy four days touring all the important sights in our nation's capitol. The first day included a stop along the way in Philadelphia to view the Liberty Bell and Independence Hall. From there, students arrived in Baltimore, Maryland where they spent the night watching the Oakland A's play the Baltimore orioles at Camden Yards. Despite record breaking heat, students continued touring and saw Arlington National Cemetery, Lafayette Park and all monuments and war memorials. Students also visited several Smithsonian Museums. Some visits included the Air&Space Museum, Natural History Museum, American History Museum & the American Indian Museum.

In connection with the language arts curriculum, students also attended the Holocaust Museum which was the cornerstone of their field trip. According to trip co-coordinators Lynda Spinazola and Melissa

Simmons, the students exhibited exemplary behavior and were praised by tour directors for their respectfulness as well as attentiveness. Adding to the already exciting itinerary, students were assembled on the Mall Lawn for a special speech and meeting with

White House Director of Speech, Jon Favreau. Favreau has Wilmington roots as his mother was an art teacher at the West Intermediate School. Favreau spoke to the students about what it is like to be part of President Obama's staff and what his job entails.

Favreau also offered a unique experience for six lucky students this year.

Six students were offered an opportunity to have a private White House tour after hours. All students who were inter-

Culvert repair delays work on Lawrence St.

By JAYNE W. MILLER

WILMINGTON - Sidewalk work, typical in the summer months, was delayed this year when an old corrugated metal culvert on Shady Lane began to give way, necessitating an emergency filing with the conservation commission and the setting up of environmental controls. DPW Superintendent Donald Onusseit anticipated that the replacement of the culvert would be complete by the end of this week.

The next sidewalk project for Wilmington, originally slated to begin this week but delayed due to the culvert snafu, will add a sidewalk on the west side of Lawrence Street from Glen Road to Hamlin Lane. Next year the sidewalk will be built from

A look back at Wilmington of yesteryear...

A house built by chocolate

By LARZ F. NEILSON

WILMINGTON - Fred Roberts first appeared in Wilmington in 1899. Born in Berwick, Maine in 1856 to an old Yankee family, he was raised in Boston. Shortly after his arrival, his brother Herbert also moved to Wilmington. Both men were candy manufacturers, Herbert making a well-known brand of caramels and Fred being the man who made chocolates.

Fred bought a home on the northerly side of Burlington Avenue, a few hundred feet westerly of the present Deming Way. Westerly of the home, the road ran slightly uphill. On that hill, there were three homes. Beyond the crest of the hill was a larger home with a barn behind it.

He demolished one of the homes, and the other two were moved across the street. The larger home on the property had been owned by the Kirkpatrick family. Today, that house is on Burlington Avenue, opposite Boutwell Street.

Fred's wife, Althera Clendennin, was a very kindly lady, five years older than her husband. There were three daughters, Helen, Althera and another, whose name has been lost. Althera married Harry Fletcher, the coachman, and they moved to Melrose.

The F. H. Roberts Co. manufactured Apollo Chocolates in Boston. The treasurer of his company was a German woman named Alice Albrink. She was also the source of many ideas that helped to market those chocolates. In those days, chocolates were sold largely in bulk. Alice suggested a nice covered box, one that would be attractive to a young man about to go a-courting.

Army transported Spc. Crosby's body home via airplane to Logan Airport in Boston Monday. Family and close friends were taken onto the tarmac and an honor guard took the casket off the plane.
"It was very respectful," said Wilmington Veteran's Agent Louis Cimaglia, who attended.
Crosby is well known in Wilmington, having graduated from Wilmington High School in 2006. He was an accomplished soccer player, playing from kindergarten with the Wilmington Youth Soccer Program through high school. He was also a four-year member of the winter and spring track teams at WHS.

After graduation, Crosby attended Worcester State College and enlisted in the Army in 2008.
His parents, Robert L. and Donna M. (Ricci) Crosby are prominent in the community through service with a variety of non-profit and community based groups.
His wake was held Tuesday evening at Nichols Funeral Home and his funeral Wednesday morning at St. Thomas Villanova Church followed by interment with full military honors at Wildwood Cemetery.

Town's sidewalk project

Hamlin Lane to Shady Lane, eventually going down to Route 62.
This extension of town sidewalks comprises part of a long-term plan to connect sidewalks on all principal connecting streets, at least on one side.
"It's going to take many years," said Onusseit. "We started it awhile ago and just finished up Woburn Street. We've been doing sections for the last five years, from Woburn Street School to the Woburn City line; a distance between three and four miles long."
The Woburn Street area boasts a number of older houses beginning on old rural highways, some built within the right of way. Lawrence is a newer street however, and Onusseit believes that the project will go quicker.
Onusseit also plans a smaller sidewalk project for a little section of Route 62 from Palmer Way to Shady Lane, on the Whitefield School side, better allowing pedestrian crossings near the Registry of Motor Vehicles office. Onusseit told the Crier that this section would not involve drainage, making it a simpler project. He plans to have it roughed in, at least, by the fall.

"It is one of those smaller projects we hope to squeeze in along the way," Onusseit said.
Other smaller projects the DPW is focusing on includes drainage problems on Lawrence Street and on Cunningham Street, including the installation of catch basins, which he hopes to have in by late fall.
The DPW also performs all the field maintenance in town and plans some improvement work behind the Whitefield School, including the installation of a small irrigation system just in time for the early fall sports season.

DIVORCE AND SOCIAL SECURITY
Social Security has very specific rules about divorce and benefits. You may be eligible for higher benefits than you expected, but you have to offer salient facts about the marriage. The right to Social Security benefits does not have to be negotiated during divorce proceedings; it is a legal entitlement.
If you were married at least 10 years to one spouse and have not remarried, then you most likely can file for Social Security benefits based on a former spouse's income — assuming that those benefits are higher than you would have received on your own. You can't get both. While your ex is alive, you qualify for spousal benefits equal to 50 percent of the spouse's full retirement, starting at your full retirement age. After the spouse dies, you can get 100 percent survivor's benefit. If you remarry after age 60 (50 if disabled), you can still collect on the earlier spouse's benefits, if they are higher.
What's the right choice with Social Security? Let us run the numbers for you at

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Congressman Edward J. Markey (D-Malden) and Senators John Kerry and Scott Brown have introduced legislation to rename the Woburn Post Office after John "Jack" Maguire, a patrolman in the Woburn Police Department who was killed in the line of duty last year.
Officer Maguire, a 34-year veteran of the Woburn police force, and a long-time Wilmington resident, was fatally shot in the line of duty when he responded to a robbery at a department store on December 26, 2010. Senators Kerry and Brown and Congressman Markey introduced legislation in both the Senate and House that would dedicate the post office located at 462 Washington Street to Officer Maguire's service. The name of the post office would be changed to the "Officer John Maguire Post Office Building."
"A three-decade veteran of the police force, Officer Maguire died protecting nearly from shoppers and employees from an armed criminal," said Rep. Markey. "It is a tragedy for his family, the Woburn Police Department, and the entire community to have lost such a brave and honorable father, husband, and colleague. With the renaming of this post office in honor of Officer Maguire, we pay homage to the life and legacy of a true hometown hero."

"Jack Maguire gave his life for the people of this city and naming this post office in his honor is just one small way to say thank you for 34 years on duty and a sacrifice that knows no words," said Sen. Kerry. "To his loving wife Desiree and to Bryan, Tara, Sean and the rest of the Maguire clan, we offer our enduring gratitude for a life dedicated to keeping others safe."

"No tribute can fully recognize the debt we owe to Officer Maguire for laying down his life to protect the public from a career criminal," said Sen. Brown. "Renaming this public building in his honor will serve to remind all who enter it of the tremendous sacrifice he made for us and the risks that all in law enforcement take every day."

She further suggested a slogan, "For those who discriminate," printed on the boxes in a nice script.
The company in 1908 had sales of a half million dollars a year.
Althera Clendennin Roberts died in 1906. The couple had no children. Two years later, Fred Roberts married Alice Albrink, the treasurer of his firm. She was one of the most gracious ladies ever to live in Wilmington.
Fred and Alice had four children. There is no name listed for the oldest daughter, born in 1910. Fred Jr. was born June 25, 1911, Phoebe on Feb. 13, 1914 and Nancy on Nov. 10, 1917.
Business was good. Fred began to think of a larger home. He looked at the hill beyond his home and the one beyond that, known from ancient days as Bear Hill. Fred bought four homes and 60 acres of land. The homes, with the exception of the Kirkpatrick home, were torn down. Fred began to plan his new house.
He chose Dinny McLaughlin of Woburn to be the stone mason. Irish-born stone masons in those days excelled in construction using granite, which was never cut. They used large stones, no small ones. Those men had acquired an eye for beauty with stones, for they had nothing else to build with.
Dinny was rough. Dinny was tough. But he was a friendly man who was appreciated by the men with whom he worked. He employed about 15 men to work on the Roberts house. The laborers were Italians from North Woburn, and the masons were Irishmen from Woburn. Every day, they would take the early train to Wilmington, and Dinny would lead the way up Burlington Avenue to Bear Hill, with many of the men carrying their tools over their shoulders.
All the stones in the Roberts house were found on those 60 acres. Herb Barrows had the job of finding the best stones and bringing them to the work site. Roberts provided a dump cart and a horse.

In addition to the house, they also built stone walls, a carriage house, a wind mill, a hen house and a large pig house.
The Roberts house had beautiful entry, a sitting room, a sun room, a music room and a large kitchen. The dining room, which had a large oaken table, had murals on all four walls, painted by a lady who signed herself L. Parsons. One scene shows Gay Head on Martha's Vineyard, with the Boston to New York steamer in the background. Another was a painting of Squantum, and another of Rockport.
The kitchen was the domain of Mammy Johnson, assisted by her daughter and occasionally some girls from the neighborhood.
A speaking tube connected the kitchen with the cellar. Mrs. Johnson would blow into the tube, and a whistle could be heard at the other end.
As the Roberts children came along, Mammy solved many problems by speaking into that tube. Harry Fletcher, the coachman, would be expected to be there. "Mister Fletcher, come up here!" she would yell. Whether he was there or not was not important. As soon as the children heard Mrs. Johnson's voice, they were on their best behavior.
The grounds of the Roberts estate were designed by A. Chandler Manning, a landscape architect who lived in the home of Glen Road later owned by Hayward and May Bliss. Herb Barrows moved several trees for this landscaping project.
Bill Babine of Laurel Avenue was the head gardener. He worked there until 1936 and later became the Wilmington tree warden.
Fred Roberts had a summer home in Wells Beach, Maine. He first had a Stanley Steamer, but did not like having to stop to add water. So he returned it to the manufacturer and bought a Packard Twin Six limousine, a Packard Twin Car, a Buick limousine and a Ford runabout.
Roberts would rise at 5:00 a.m. After breakfast, he would walk to the railroad station and take the train to Boston. On Friday afternoons, he would take the train out to North Wilmington, where his chauffeur, Otto Bischoff, would meet him with one of the Packards. They would depart North Wilmington in a swirl of dust for the four-hour trip to Wells Beach.
The Roberts were prominent members of the Wilmington Methodist Church. Alice Roberts was a Sunday school teacher, and would lead the children in song, nodding her head in time to the music. The annual Sunday school picnic would often be held at the Roberts estate. Mrs. Roberts would be very precise, and would have purchased the exact number of ice cream cups needed to have one for each child. Fred and Alice Roberts donated the church organ. Alice Roberts also donated a home on Church Street as the parsonage.

Roberts played a prominent role in Wilmington's joining up with the Reading Municipal Light Dept. to bring electricity to Wilmington in 1909. Preceding the town meeting, there was a parade from Wilmington Square to the town hall, with Fred Roberts, Charlie Hudson and Dr. Daniel Buzzell leading the way, each carrying a lantern. Behind them was blacksmith Schamiel MacIntosh, leading a goat. The town meeting voted overwhelmingly to bring in electric power.
Fred Roberts sold his business after World War I. He died on Oct. 20, 1920 and was buried in Somersworth, NH. Alice Roberts died on Sept. 8, 1954 at age 81.

Letter to the editor

Any suggestions?

Dear Editor,

Can you imagine a life in which a postage stamp is a major expense?

That's how things were for me at this time last year. My income covered my mortgage payment, property tax and homeowner's insurance, leaving me with sixty-seven cents a month for everything else.

Eventually, I was able to renegotiate my loan so I had $30 a month to spend on gas, insurance and repairs for my car, co-payments for my medical needs, telephone, et cetera. I felt almost prosperous.

Then, on July 1, I received my new tax bill. Thanks to all the people who voted to shift half the sewer debt to the tax levy, the increased property tax has raised my housing costs above my income.

You may have heard that the average Social Security recipient gets $1,400 per month. That's not me (or anyone I know). My income is closer to $800 a month.

Since I can't increase my income (Congress didn't think we needed a cost of living increase the last couple of years) or lower my expenses, I worry about becoming homeless very soon.

What can I do? Any suggestions would be greatly appreciated. While I'm asking for suggestions, I should tell you that I probably wouldn't be in this situation if the people who owe me money would repay what they borrowed.

Thank you for your time and attention.

Yours truly,
Jae Gray

Ride With Pride

The hand that gives, gathers. (English Proverb)

About five years ago I bought a bike - the Classic Cruiser, sometimes called the Retro (like me) - foot brake, balloon tires, big wide seat, fenders, metallic powder blue. It's true what they say, you never forget how to ride a bike. But after thirty-five years or so, I didn't feel at all sure of myself. I had to ease into getting my balance - and confidence - before actually pedaling down the streets. That summer I had two minor (ahem) accidents, and many tense moments. Believe me, it's a minefield out there - living right on Main Street/Rt. 38, my re-introduction to bike riding was baptism by fire. The first mishap, not 400 feet from my door, was caused by a mailbox sticking out too far into the sidewalk, camouflaged by a bush. My right handlebar caught the edge, sending me flying forward as the bike abruptly turned sideways. Tangled into the swerving bike, I hopped and dragged myself across the pavement (ouch!). I wasn't hurt that bad - both palms scraped, one knee chopped up a bit. The interesting thing was, no cars stopped on busy Main Street, so I guess I didn't look as distressed (and goofy) as I thought. Or, more likely, no one noticed or cared. Determined not to be gun-shy, I continued to ride. A few weeks later I bounced off the side of a car that suddenly pulled out of a driveway without warning. He saw me just as I skidded to a stop, almost in the kick of time. No problem! My last fender-bender, months later, could have been filmed for comedy. It involved my grandson on Wildwood Street. Just as I was about to yell, "Watch the pine needles, they're slippery," he went head-over-heels right in front of me. I crashed into him, tumbling down the embankment into the swamp. We were both still in one piece so after licking our wounds, I said "Onward."

I've smartened up a lot since then. I'm acutely aware of the road/driveway/sidewalk hazards, riding defensively all the time, keeping in mind what I read a while ago, that the most dangerous activity you can do for exercise, over a certain age (that would be me), is ride a bike. Great. But by now I know the area where I ride really well - sticking to those side streets and big sprawling bus-divisions and all the crowded little streets around Silver Lake - in other words, low-traffic, high-visibility, no-surprises.

It came back to me why, as a child, bike riding was so wonderful. It's the freedom to go so far away from home - alone. For the rest of us, being able to glide along, with no sense of time, going in and out of those neighborhood streets that you would never have any reason to drive down, observing and um ... spying, free from the frustration of the stop-and-go of a car, outside in the fresh air well, it's sheer pleasure if you ask me. But don't get the idea that I'm some kind of long-distance rider - quite the opposite. My total riding distance is never more than about ten miles. The thought of doing more has never entered my mind - until lately.

The Pan Mass Challenge is in its 32nd year. Just about everyone has heard about the PMC, the biggest of all bike-a-thon fund raisers, raising more money for charity than any other single event in the country. All of the money goes to the Dana Farber Cancer Institute, through their Jimmy Fund. To date $303 million has been raised for cancer research.

To be honest though, in spite of that, I never paid any attention to the TV promotions and stories. In my subconscious I suppose, was the feeling that the PMC doesn't need me, they're doing fine, in fact the PMC is doing fabulous. And I've become pretty jaded about fund raisers in general. If it isn't a walk for hunger, a jog for justice, a run for religion or a parade for homeless pets - well, you get my drift. A cartoon in the New Yorker said it best: A doctor and a patient are in the exam room. The doctor says "You'll probably recognize the disease you have Sir, by the fund raiser by the same name."

So last week, when tall dark and handsome, well-known Wilmington Townie Mickey Rooney asked me if I would help by writing something about the PMC, there was a long pause. Then we got talking for quite a while, joking and laughing our heads off (Rooney is extremely funny and likable), and making fun of everything and everybody - mostly ourselves. Try to picture this: We were on our bicycles the day we ran into each other - just the contrast was hysterical. Rooney was on a racing bike, dressed in full racing bike paraphernalia (scary looking helmet, wrap-around dark sunglasses, serious spandex apparel) - Spiderman comes to mind. Here I am in a thread-bare T-shirt, lifeless pants, rolled up past the chain, mop of hair blowing in all directions, a basket filled with wild flowers and weeds that I'd cut along the roadside - a distorted version of Anne of Green Gables, on my bygone bike. This will be Mickey Rooney's 25th year riding in the 192-mile, two-day bike-a-thon. He told me that there are about twenty Wilmington residents that ride. When I asked him why he rode in the PMC he talked more about the over three thousand volunteers who make the whole thing possible and how important they are, and so on. When I pressed him for an answer, Rooney talked about his team's pedal partner - a young, very sick child. He struggled for the right words, saying "I can't tell you how self-gratifying it is ... I'd rather do this than win the lottery, really I mean that."

Mickey Rooney has the true spirit of giving like no one else I know. He's always kept a low-profile, never seeking the limelight. His sincere empathy for others, his fundamental belief that all of us should help each other, is inspirational.

Cancer has touched all of our lives - the PMC is so far reaching, providing much of the money needed for the research that will one day eradicate cancer. To support Mickey Rooney during this spectacular event, you can call him at 978-658-6140, or you can make a donation by sending a check payable to the PMC/Jimmy Fund to his home, 287 Chestnut Street, Wilmington, MA 01887, or you can support someone else that you know who is riding - or you can go to the website www.pmc.org.

Many times I've thought, if you're going to get sick, get sick in Boston, the medical Mecca of the country, where the most important research is happening - in great part because of the Pan Mass Challenge.

Moving Mountains

by Mary Cote

Normal. I've been back in Massachusetts for a little over a week, and I'm fully acquainted with what should be described as Normal life. My house is just as it was when I left, my friends are here - everything looks and fits perfectly into a normal summer. Except for me. The past six weeks were a whirlwind of emotions, serious conversations, adventure and trials. I've spent time hanging out with missionaries and hearing their stories. I've lived and eaten with three different French families, and have been blessed by their hospitality. I've hiked and camped outside in the foothills of the Alps. I've thought about the beautiful country of France, and the pessimism that the Christians I met there have to live with - day after day. At Champfleuri, I had to understand that the French teens who sing and shout praises all week are returning to broken homes, or homes with no church communities within two hours drive, or a church with no youth group.

The day I left France I was happy to be returning home to sleep in my own bed and to hug my parents, and to see my friends. But when I landed, and passed through security, I was hit with the question - "So how was it? Tell me about France!" and that's when I felt a wave of uncertainty wash over me - about being at home, about myself, and about living in the land of Normal.

Returning. After a few days of feeling like I had a foot in France and a foot in Wilmington, I started talking. It wasn't easy, but it has been good. Since my time in France was so full and is still so fresh, I am still figuring out myself what I need to learn from the past six weeks. From the first week, living with the Mirones and helping with Silas to the next two weeks with French families and feeling like an outsider, to the last three weeks full of exhaustion, work, camp games and laughter.

But then there's this question: "So how was it?" Serving as a polite scold of my efforts to assimilate back into Normal. It's difficult, but I know, completely necessary. I'm slowly realizing that experiences - whether it be travel, getting to know someone, learning about something new - these are not intended to be isolated in one area of life. Stay with me, but I believe there is beauty in experiences changing how you think, even if it's something as simple as a new way to work in the morning. Finding a new path - experiencing life in a different way, creates the opportunity for new circumstances. This excites me, and since returning I've been thinking about how this type of beauty isn't cheap, because it demands a sacrifice of the "status quo." Going to France, in big and small ways, has revitalized what I know of Normal.

So as I shuffle my feet, and try to talk about France, I am trying to bridge the gap between two ideas of Normal. And that's just confusing. I'm learning to rest in the beauty of having my world changed by this experience, but I can't keep from asking myself, "So, what is Normal, now?" And I don't really have an answer to that question - yet.

RMLD gives tips to keep cool

READING - Reading Municipal Light Department (RMLD) offers tips on keeping cool, while also conserving energy, during the hot summer months.

Keeping cool with air conditioning:

- Set the thermostat at 78 degrees or higher. You save 3-5% on your air conditioning cost for each degree you raise the thermostat.

- Clean filters. Check air filters monthly or as recommended by the manufacturer. Clean or replace them as needed.

- Use the auto fan setting.
- Buy an Energy Star air conditioner. It can save you up to 10% over one that doesn't have the label. However, have an air conditioning technician or energy auditor determine the right size unit for the space.

Keeping cool without air conditioning:

- Use fans. At night they help rid the house of the heat from the daytime sun.

- Close shades and windows during the day. At night open windows opposite one another for cross-ventilation.

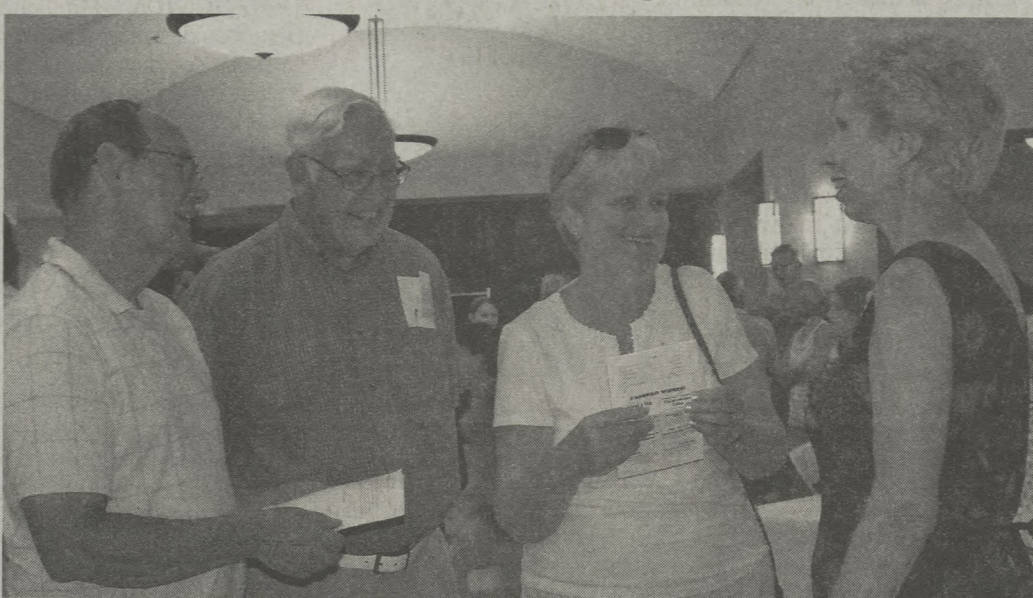

- Use ceiling fans. They make people feel about four degrees cooler than the actual temperature.

Turn off ceiling fans when you are not in the room. The fans cool you, not the air.

- Reverse the ceiling fan motor in summer.

RMLD Customer Service Manager Maureen Hanifan also advises, "Install a programmable thermostat. Make sure it's programmed to automatically turn down the heating or cooling when you are not home and when you're sleeping." Visit the RMLD website - www.rmld.com.

Old Sturbridge Village "Redcoats & Rebels" Aug. 6-7

New England's largest military reenactment includes Tewksbury reenactors

STURBRIDGE - Old Sturbridge Village's "Redcoats & Rebels" is New England's largest Revolutionary War reenactment, and this year's event will be the largest to date. The Billerica Colonial Minutemen, led by Tewksbury resident Bill Brimer, and the Sixteenth Queen's Light Dragoons, led by Tewksbury resident Don Beale, will be among nearly 1,000 soldier reenactors from eight states who will participate in the August 6 - 7 event, which features mock battles, drilling, musket and cannon demonstrations, fife and drum music, and the chance to see military life up close.

Since Old Sturbridge Village offers a free return visit within 10 days, visitors can attend both days of the event for the price of one. Admission also includes extended hours on Saturday, Aug. 6, when the Village will remain open until 8:00 p.m. for the Twilight Encampment, where visitors can mingle with the soldiers around their campfires. For details, visit www.osv.org or call 800-SEE-1830.

More than 40 units from eight states will participate in the reenactment, including six companies attending for the first time. More soldiers will participate in Redcoats & Rebels this year than in any of the previous eight years of the event. Reenactors portray British and Colonial soldiers, as well as their allies from Ireland, Scotland, Wales, Germany, and France. This wide range of companies is an accurate representation of the nations and soldiers who fought in the war for American independence.

Following a parade of British troops through the town, the Village fields will become the site of a mock battle each afternoon. Troops will reenact a battle scenario where Americans and their allies attack a British-occupied town. Visitors can see surgeons "treat the wounded" and see the American troops get their smallpox inoculations. Throughout the day they can tour behind-the-scenes in both the British and American camps to learn what life was really like for these 18th-century soldiers - how they ate, slept, and even how they did laundry.

Other events designed to provide a look into the lives of soldiers include reconnoitering with a Ranger from Peter's Corps, and a prisoner exchange between the Americans and British (Saturday only). Special events on Sunday include a Sunday Service for the troops, the arrival of American soldier's pay and uniforms, and a court martial trial with the HMS Somerset. Young visitors will enjoy learning the real words to "Yankee Doodle," making tri-cornered hats, and drilling with the Second Massachusetts Regiment.

In addition, visitors can learn about the fashions and customs of the time during programs like "Mrs. Peabody's Levee" - a look at 18th-century foundation garments presented by the group "Ladies of Refined Taste," which will also present "Runaway Runway" - a look at civilian clothes in the late 1700s. Military fashions through the years will be presented by the Tenth Massachusetts Light Infantry. On Saturday, music, dancing, and ball games will be featured. A complete schedule of activities can be found at www.osv.org.

Reenactors choose to portray either British or Colonial units for a variety of reasons. Andrew Fredericks, of Rochester, Mass., commander of Tew's Company, a Colonial unit based in Rhode Island, says the reenactors in his unit want the public to know that "a group of common men from the tiny colony (of Rhode Island) had the perseverance, fortitude, and willpower to become one of Washington's premiere fighting units."

Another new unit, Butler's Rangers, led by David Sorek, of Monroe, Conn., portrays a group of Loyalist soldiers fighting for England - a unit largely forgotten by history. According to Sorek, the original members of Butler's Rangers were average Americans working hard to build a good life for their families. When faced with the prospect of war, they chose the status quo and loyalty to the Crown, and were persecuted for these beliefs and stripped of their belongings. Joining Butler's Rangers gave them an opportunity to take back what was theirs.

Old Sturbridge Village celebrates life in early New England from 1790 - 1840. Located just off the Massachusetts Turnpike and Routes I-84 and 20 in Sturbridge, Mass., OSV is open year-round, but hours vary seasonally. Currently, the Village is open seven days a week from 9:30 a.m. - 5:00 p.m. Admission is: $20 for adults; $18 for seniors; $7 for children ages 3-17; children under 3 are admitted free. Each admission includes free parking and a free second-day visit within 10 days. Woo Card subscribers get 25% of adult daytime admission; college Woo cardholders receive 50% off adult daytime admission. For details, visit www.osv.org or call 800-SEE-1830.

Remembering Pleasure Island

TWEEKSBURY - The following events take place at Tewksbury Public Library

Exploring Pleasure Island: On Wednesday, August 3 at 6:30 p.m., join Robert McLaughlin - Co-founder of "The Friends of Pleasure Island" and author of "Images of America: Pleasure Island" - to remember (or discover) Pleasure Island. Pleasure Island, which opened in June 1959, rose from the wetlands off of Route 128 and into an 80-acre theme park ("The Disneyland of the East"). Through photographs and music, McLaughlin will recall memories of riding boats to Pirate Cove; searching for the great white whale; driving a Jenney car; getting dizzy in the Slanty Shanty; and taking a ride on Old Smoky.

Exploring Boston Harbor: On Wednesday, August 10 at 6:30 p.m., join John Galluzzo - public program coordinator for the Massachusetts Audubon Society and co-author of "Boston Harbor: Postcard History Series" - to learn about the Boston Harbor. Take a trip with John around the harbor to survey postcards of its yacht clubs, islands, forts, steamboats, beaches and much more in this presentation based on the book of the same name.

Exploring Salem: On Wednesday, August 17 at 6:30 p.m., join Jim McAllister - Salem historian, author and founder of Derby Square Tours - for an armchair tour of Salem, Massachusetts, one of America's most fascinating and historic cities. The audience will be treated to an audiovisual presentation that features nearly 250 slides, many of which have appeared in the New York Times, and other national publications including Money, Tour and Resorts, and Americana magazines.

Exploring Massachusetts: On Wednesday, August 31 at 6:00 p.m., join Peter and Debbie Lincoln - retired educators - to learn about their fascinating journey to each of the 351 cities and towns in Massachusetts. Entitled "From Purgatory to Podunk," their lively, interactive presentation is a historical, geographical tour, filled with trivia and fun facts. The audience is in store for a lively evening featuring the variety, richness, and beauty of Massachusetts.

Must-See Movie Night: On Tuesday, August 30 at 5:45 p.m., attend a screening of one of Hollywood's latest DVD releases - "The Conspirator" (PG-13, 123 minutes). Starring James McAvoy, Robin Wright, Justin Long, Evan Rachel Wood, and Tom Wilkinson, this historical drama is based on Kate Clifford Larson's book "The Assassin's Accomplice: Mary Surratt and the Plot to Kill Abraham Lincoln." In the wake of Abraham Lincoln's assassination, seven men and one woman are arrested and charged with conspiring to kill the President, Vice President, and Secretary of State. The lone woman charged, Mary Surratt, owns a boarding house where John Wilkes Booth and others met and planned the simultaneous attacks. Against the ominous backdrop of post-Civil War Washington, newly-minted lawyer Frederick Aiken, a 28-year-old Union war hero, reluctantly agrees to defend Surratt before a military tribunal. Free popcorn and lemonade will be served. Co-sponsored by the Tewksbury Lions Club.

Registration is strongly recommended for library events as it aids presenters and staff with planning. (No registration needed for Movie Nights.) Register by stopping by the Reference Desk, calling 978-640-4490 ext. 207, or by visiting the library's online calendar of events (www.tewksburypl.org). Refreshments will be provided. Door prizes will be awarded. Events are FREE thanks to the generosity of the Friends of the Tewksbury Public Library. The Friends of the Tewksbury Public Library's Friendly Little Bookshop will be open prior to all Wednesday night events.

No. Woburn near Wilmington line; neighbors express concerns

Woburn Heights' 168 units unveiled

By JIM HAGGERTY

WOBURN - North Woburn residents got their first look at plans for the new Woburn Heights at 1024 Main St. in North Woburn at a "Neighborhood Meeting," sponsored by Ward 6 Alderman Michael Raymond at City Hall.

The grassroots meeting turned into more of a site development/landscape/access meeting as officials from the Woburn-based The Dolben Company unveiled plans for 168 units atop a rising hill on the westerly side of Main Street not far from the Wilmington town line on "Santullo's Hill."

The development came as a result of the city of Woburn losing a Mass. Supreme Court case in 2006 when the court ruled against the city and its reluctance to allow such a development at the R-2 (Residential - 2) site.

The so-called 40-B project will include 42 units of affordable housing included in the 168 units atop the hill. There are no condominiums in the mix.

"It's the first time I saw the plans," said Ald. Raymond, greeting constituents in a hot City Council chamber.

Raymond was quick to call attention to the fact it was a "Neighborhood Meeting" and very, very preliminary in nature at best. "We are here to ask questions and to seek some answers," noted Raymond.

The Dolben Company in this instance is answerable to the state but must also go through the Special Permit process with the City Council to erect the four-building, three-story complex.

The 0.81 acres was technically bought by the Woburn 38 Development Corporation, LLC from New Haven, Connecticut on February 8, 2011 with Albert Cirone the contact person in the corporation, according to Woburn Assessor's records. Albert Cirone, according to city records, was also the previous owner, having purchased the land in 1987.

"We're not really even in the planning stages," said Raymond at the closing of the two-hour meeting. "It's all about questions at this point." "You have to remember we are under a court order."

Meeting-goers were handed colored photo of Dolben's works in Johnston, Rhode Island, as well as a schematic layout of the buildings on the site, as well as a picture of one of the four buildings - their first look at the buildings.

The plans showed an "S-shaped," curling road going through a main entrance at 1024 Main St. with bends to the north and south before leveling off on the crown of the hill.

The meetings Q&A and focus quickly turned to site development issues with little mention of the actual buildings themselves.

Safety concerns were expressed about the main entrance and turns off Main Street, an emergency egress road that must be built, blasting, landscaping and other issues right down to the disturbing sounds of trucks being load with gravel and rock.

Senior Vice President Andrew K. Dolben, CPM of The Dolben Company, Inc. of 150 Presidential Way heads the firm that is involved in property management, development management, marketing and brokerage of such projects. He was the first to greet the North Woburn residents, many of whom were abutters.

Woburn Attorney Joseph R. Tarby III of the Murtha, Cullina, Roche, Carens & DeGiacomo also headed up the introductions.

VP Dolben was quick to point out the history of the company by outlining its record, dating back to 1929. He showed in a slide presentation a dozen, high-grade properties developed by the company including the 100-unit Brickwork Cambridge, the 281-unit Neponset Land in Quincy, the 300-unit Ledges @ Johnston (R.I.) and closer to home, the 280-unit Summit Place in Methuen and the 164-unit Heritage @ Bedford Spring in Bedford.

Also in attendance were Ward 2 Alderman Richard Gately, Ward 3 Alderman Mark Gaffney and alderman-at-large Richard Haggerty. Gately questioned, among other things, the continuation of the landscaping and access up the hill to the properties.

The properties also show a swimming pool and a club house.

"We are not into adding conditions at this point," said Raymond at another juncture, noting the purpose was to ask questions and hear concerns in the very preliminary stages of the planning.

Dolben officials also said they will be taking down a home at the top of the hill.

The apartment units would be one and two bedroom. Raymond also noted that even at the large Avalon Bay development at the Reading line there are just 20 students in Woburn schools as an overloading of the Altavesta Elementary School was also a question.

"Also, if there needs to be exceptions, then the developer can go to the Board of Appeals," he said.

Raymond was also quick to point out the city is not at 10 percent affordable housing mandate from the state and is only at 7.6%. The Archstone proposal, he said, would have increased it greatly but the city has purchased the land.

The "emergency egress" was also of major concern to neighbors. However, the developer noted the egress is still being addressed but probably would be little used, if used at all.

The next general meeting will be a public hearing at the Woburn City Council on Tuesday, August 9 while an outstanding issue on 40B is still being continued and debated.

edges that it's the "state's timetable."

Onusseit's ideal timeline would have construction beginning next spring.

In a split vote in 2008, Selectmen voted to add traffic signaling to the complicated intersection. Initial options included a 'roundabout' configuration, which would have required a land taking from abutters.

As reported in the Crier in 2008, the roundabout solution would improve safety, reduce traffic speed, improve traffic operation and make for a safer pedestrian crossing. It would also be aesthetically pleasing and would include the replacement of the historical monument. However, on the down side it would require some land acquisitions, the removal of several large trees, be potentially difficult to snow plow, and difficult for bicyclists. Town Manager Michael Caira noted at the time that a majority of abutters favored this solution.

The Traffic Signal option will also improve safety, will create the safest pedestrian crossing, and presents the least impact on the area because there would be no land acquisitions and no large trees removed. This option can accommodate emergency vehicle preemption devices such as the Opticom system utilized by Wilmington emergency vehicles, and for this reason was endorsed by Fire Department as represented by Deputy Chief Corcoran who feared that cars would get stopped up in a roundabout and emergency vehicles would not be able to get through.

Public safety and traffic flow were clearly the primary issues Selectmen focused upon in making their decision three years ago. In spite of projections that traffic signals could cause increased congestion during peak hours, that more serious accidents tend to happen at traffic signals rather than roundabouts, and the expressed preference for a roundabout by several abutters, Selectmen voted 3-2 (McCoy and Newhouse opposed) to support the Traffic Signal solution. Those supporting the Traffic Signal approach cited concerns for emergency vehicles as a primary reason.

A very rough estimated construction budget Onusseit reported as $800,000, which would be paid by the state, with some federal funds, through the TIP program. The town will pay for engineering, plans, and permits for the project.

ested wrote essays regarding the profession of speech writing and these essay writers' names were place in an anonymous drawing. The names were drawn live on the WMS television program. Sixty seven students entered their essays in the contest with only six lucky winners. The winners included; Ronald Judkins, Rachel Johansson, Tierney McCue, Andrew Murray, Jamie Busby and Candace Cocca. Students were accompanied on the White House tour by chaperones Melissa Simmons and Sara Collings. The tour included a visit to the White House Rose Garden, the Oval Office, as well as the cabinet room and Jon Favreau's private office. Students were able to look at the actual speeches that Favreau had initially written and were then edited in President Obama's own hand. The group capped off their week with a tour of Annapolis Naval Academy and then returned to Wilmington. According to WMS Principal Christine McMenimen, the students exhibited the core values of Wilmington Middle School; confidence, citizenship and responsibility.

Shawsheen School visits the State House.

In a tradition spanning decades, the third grades from the Shawsheen and Woburn Street Elementary Schools visit the State House during the spring semester bringing their youthful enthusiasm while viewing one of the most beautiful buildings in the Commonwealth. The students, teachers and chaperones enjoyed a tour and a question and answer period with Rep. Jim Miceli.

School lunch guidelines just got tougher

French bread variety), brown rice, whole-wheat bagels, and even tortillas.

Two weeks ago, Massachusetts health officials endorsed new nutrition standards that supporters boast will be among the toughest in the country and will help combat childhood obesity. Specifically, all sugared drinks and foods prepared with artificial sweeteners will be banned from the lunch line, while the quantity of fats and salts allowed in offerings will also be regulated.

Schools must begin enforcing some of the guidelines as early as August 2012 and the regulations apply to all food sold or provided at school a la carte lines, vending machines, school stores, events, and fundraisers during the school day.

Initial efforts at the state level to eliminate flavored milk with the new regulations met with resistance. Parents with children who would prefer no milk if they cannot have flavored milk expressed support for keeping the flavored option. Dairy companies are currently working to create a skim milk with a chocolate flavor without the added sugar content.

Palen is not concerned that Wilmington will see a large drop in students wishing to purchase lunches, because the changes have been gradual over the last few years.

"Middle school bagel sales plummeted when we switched to whole grain. We are looking for more appealing whole grains," said Palen. "About 60 percent of students in Wilmington buy lunch. I don't think it will drop off at all, because most of it they've already been getting anyway. It makes good sense. As long as the taste is there; that's our biggest concern."

The price of lunches is also going up next year, a quarter per meal, in an attempt to meet federal requirements. For Kindergarten through elementary school, lunch will cost $1.80. Lunches at the Middle School and high school cost $2.05.

Northeast Baseball team closes out subpar season

By CHRIS RICCIARDI
Sports Correspondent

The 2011 Northeast Baseball season has come to a close for the Wilmington Wildcats, who finished with a 2-13 record. It has been a difficult summer for the Wildcats, who faced many difficulties throughout the season. However, coach Mike Ciampa said one obstacle stood out among all the rest.

"I was only disappointed by the commitment," Ciampa said. "That's all. I really didn't care about the record. We didn't have the same lineup for many games. You can't expect (having a full squad every time) during the summer with work, vacations, and everything else. We had kids moving positions, which is hard. I knew that I would be moving kids around more than I would like to. My only expectation I have is that anyone who shows up to play gives 100% every time they get on the field. They all tried."

Wilmington started the season on a rough note, going 1-5 in the first six games. Starting pitcher Colin Doherty threw a one-hitter against Greater Lowell later in the season, a game that Wilmington won by a 2-0 score. They couldn't pick up another win, however, as the more experienced teams took advantage of the inexperienced Wildcats.

Wilmington faced a pitching shortage several times over the course of the season, and Doherty proved to be the ace of the Wildcats' staff. He showed his skills on the pitching mound in several games. He had accurate control and was able to overpower opposing batters, nearly throwing a no-hitter against Greater Lowell. Ciampa said that Doherty had the potential to take the next step in his baseball career.

"Colin Doherty was our most effective pitcher," Ciampa said. "I didn't have any expectations for him coming into the season. He showed that he's ready for the varsity level. His command is much better. (In the game against Greater Lowell), he was throwing strikes, moving the ball around, and hitting corners."

In the game against Greater Lowell, Doherty struck out six batters and only allowed a walk in the one-hitter. He gave up the no-hitter after an opposing batter hit a single in the last inning. Jimmy Stein had two hits in that game and also scored a run.

Ciampa said that Andrew Sears, Stein and Jeff Favuzza were also stand-out players during the season. Sears primarily played as catcher, while Stein and Favuzza played at several positions over the summer.

"They were the most improved," Ciampa said. "The thing is that they made most of the games. They played all the time."

Ciampa said that in addition to Doherty, several other players were ready for the jump to the varsity level. He said that they needed to work during the offseason to get ready for a possible promotion to the varsity Wildcats, but that they had the skills to do it.

With their 2-13 record, Wilmington didn't qualify for the Northeast Baseball League playoffs.

Under 18 Softball team continues to compete

Andover 14, Wilmington 3

It's always frustrating to leave runners on base but when you leave the bases loaded in three separate innings of a game, the odds of winning that game are diminished. That's what happened to the U18 Wilmington softball team last week in Andover as they left the bases full in the first, fourth and sixth innings and stranded thirteen runners total. Coupled with Andover's 13-hit attack and several Wildcat errors, it's not surprising that Andover ran away with a 14-3 victory.

Wilmington got on the board in the first inning when Jackie Kennedy reached on an error and stole second base. Katherine McKenna's two-out single drove home Kennedy. Jackie Parece reached on an error and Kennedy Harper walked to load the bases but all were left stranded in what was to become a familiar scene.

In the third, with one out, Lauren McKenna lined a shot into deep left field. Had it not been for an opening in the fence she would have had a triple, if not a homerun but had to settle for a ground-rule double.

Katherine McKenna's second hit of the game moved her sister to third base. Katherine's attempt to steal second was foiled but the maneuver allowed Lauren to score Wilmington's second run.

By the fourth inning, Andover was up 8-2 as they belted out nine hits, including three doubles. Harper led off the fourth for Wildcats with a bunt single. An Alliy Gemellaro walk and back-to-back fielders choices by Casey MacDonald and Jenna Domek loaded the bases but once again all were left stranded. Wilmington failed to score again in the fifth even though Kennedy led off with a single and stole her second base of the game. With two outs Parece walked and that's as far they got. Meanwhile Andover added five more runs in the home half of the fifth with four more hits, including two doubles and a triple, as well as a sacrifice fly.

Gemellaro led off the sixth by reaching safely on a bunt. She stole second before Megan Howland and Nicole Potcner received back-to-back walks. With the bases loaded, Kennedy got her second hit of the game driving in Gemellaro for what would be Wilmington's final run. Harper reached base in the seventh with her second hit but that was the only bit of offense in the inning and Wilmington would fall to 3-4 with the loss.

The Wildcats return home on Monday to face Salem at the West Field and then travel to Lincoln/Sudbury on Tuesday.

Wilmington 11,
Belmont/Maynard 7

Wilmington's U18 softball team pounded out 13 hits and scored multiple runs in the first, third and fifth innings to beat a combined team from Belmont and Maynard 11-7. In the first inning a triple by Kim Woods drove in both Lauren and Katherine McKenna. Woods would then score on a wild pitch. Wilmington was down 5-3 when Casey MacDonald led off the third inning with a single. Kelsey Mangan walked and then Kennedy Harper drove in MacDonald with a single. Lauren McKenna's single scored Mangan and was followed by a single by Katherine McKenna, scoring Harper. Woods grounded out but it allowed Lauren McKenna to score the seventh Wilmington run.

Wildcat pitcher Megan Howland retired six straight in the fourth and fifth innings to keep Belmont/Maynard off the board. With one out in the home half of the fifth, Jackie Kennedy singled and stole second base. Lauren McKenna singled and also stole second. Katherine McKenna followed with a double to centerfield, scoring both runners. A Jackie Parece single scored McKenna and then Alliy Gemellaro doubled home Parece to put Wilmington up 11-5.

Belmont/Maynard scored a run in each of the final two innings and in the seventh it took two good defensive plays by Wilmington to preserve the win. With runners on 1st and third, a base hit to leftfield scored one run. The runner on first attempted to advance to third base but Kennedy fired to third baseman Danielle Reynolds for the out. Belmont/Maynard then loaded the bases. With two out and the tying run at the plate, a long fly ball was run down and caught by Woods in centerfield to end the game.

Reading 15, Wilmington 4

Wilmington hosted Reading on Wednesday night and the Reading Rage combined powerful hitting, steady pitching and a solid defense to snap the Wildcats three game winning streak with a 15-4 rout at the West Field. Reading didn't waste time as they scored four runs in the top of the first inning on four hits. Wilmington came back with two runs in the bottom of the inning. Jackie Kennedy singled followed by a Katherine McKenna single. An error allowed Kennedy to advance to third and McKenna stole second. An infield out by Kim Woods scored Kennedy and Jackie Parece followed with a RBI single, scoring McKenna.

The Wildcat bats went silent for the next four innings as the only hit given up by Reading pitching was a third inning single to Kennedy Harper. Meanwhile Reading continued to rack up the hits and scored nine more runs through six innings on ten hits. Wilmington would score their final two runs in the sixth when Kennedy singled and was driven in by a McKenna, who singled after a great at bat, fouling off multiple pitches with a two-strike count. McKenna scored on a wild pitch. Reading got two more runs in the seventh but Wilmington only managed to get two runners on in the home half when Kelsey Mangan walked and Megan Howland singled with two out. They were left stranded there as Reading got the last out to take the win 15-4.

Defensively for Wilmington, right fielder Jenna Domek came in to make a catch in the second inning and fired to Howland at first to catch the runner off, completing the double play. Domek was involved in another nice play in the fourth when she fielded a grounder to first and forced the lead runner at second base. In the fifth inning, Woods retrieved a ball that had dropped into shallow centerfield and fired to Kennedy, covering second base for the force.

Lawrence 10, Wilmington 1

Wilmington's hitting woes continued on Thursday night at Mount Vernon Field in Lawrence as they fell to the Lawrence U18 team 10-1. The Lawrence pitcher had a no hitter going through five innings until Danielle Reynolds led off the sixth with single. Three more hits in the 7th by Kennedy Harper, Katherine McKenna and Kim Woods led to Wilmington's only run when Woods drove in McKenna.

Three Wilmington errors in the third inning led to six Lawrence runs but there were a few defensive highlights. With runners at the corners, pitcher Megan Howland fielded a comebacker in the second inning and got the ball to McKenna at first base. McKenna then turned and fired home to Harper to catch the runner trying score, completing the double play.

After a Lawrence runner reached on an error in the third, she tried to advance to third base. Right fielder Casey MacDonald hit Jackie Parece at the cut off and Parece fired to third baseman Nicole Potcner for the out. In the sixth inning Potcner and Parece combined again when Potcner, at secondbase this time, made a nice play to Parece covering at second for a force-out.

The loss dropped Wilmington's record to 3-3. They return to the West field on Monday for a game against Winthrop and travel to Andover on Thursday.

Wilmington's 7th Annual half marathon and 5K road race will take place on September 25 at 10 Waltham Street in Wilmington, near WCTV. The event is from 10am-2pm and registration starts at 8 am. However, pre-registration is recommended. All proceeds will benefit scholarships for Wilmington High School students. To register visit RunReg.com or visit wilmingtonbusiness.com to print the registration form and then mail to Wilmington Chamber of Commerce, 226 Lowell Street, Wilmington, MA 01887.

Dan Vassallo, a member of the race committee, who also has a long history of winning road races and marathons, has offered a guideline to those people who plan on running in this year's half marathon in Wilmington:

We are now less than two months away from the Wilmington Half-Marathon and 5K, to be held just after 10:00 AM on Sunday, September 25th.

For more information on the race, including ways to register, please visit wilmingtonbusiness.com.

An important element of a training plan for a road race like the Wilmington Half-Marathon is hill training, something that will be introduced into the training plan this week. Essentially, they require runners to use different muscles and tax their cardiovascular system as the body tries to battle against gravity. In Wilmington, some of the best places to have a hill workout include Town Park and Forest Street on the south side of town, Fiorenza Drive on the north side of town, and though it's more subtle, the hill on Rt. 62 between Federal Street and Town Common. Benefits from hill training include stride efficiency when you're back on level ground, cardiovascular strength, and mental toughness. A lot of these can also be achieved doing intervals on a track, but by doing hill workouts you get to avoid the tedious repetition of doing laps on the track. There will be plenty of time to do that as mid-August approaches.

Next week, we will be taking a rest week after three consecutive weeks of building mileage and intensity. If you are late to arrive and find these workouts too challenging, please remember that there is also a 5K run at the same place, same time, on September 25th.

Week Starting August 1st (8 weeks before race):

Wilmington residents inducted into Foreign Language HS at Austin Prep

READING - Induction ceremonies were held this spring in Austin Preparatory School's St. Augustine Chapel for new members of four foreign language honor societies. Parents, friends, teachers, and administrators were present to honor inductees into the school's chapters of the Soci  t   Honoraire de Fran  ais, the N.J.C.L. Latin Honor Society, the Sociedad Honoraria Hisp  nica, and Slava, the National High School Slavic Honor Society. Students were selected on the basis of academic excellence, their commitment to extracurricular participation related to the languages, and service to others.

In his welcome Austin Prep Headmaster Paul J. Moran talked about the importance of high school language students studying different cultures as part of becoming familiar with new outlooks and new ways of expressing human knowledge. In his introductory remarks, Roger F. Stone, the Chair of Austin's Foreign Language Department, thanked the Headmaster for Austin's enthusiastic support of a department that teaches three modern languages and Classical Latin.

The evening began with verses of the 23rd Psalm read by students in French, Spanish, Latin, English, and Old Church Slavonic. Reflections in each of the languages taught at Austin were also part of the ceremony. They were written and read by current student members of the four societies. A reception in the school cafeteria followed the induction.

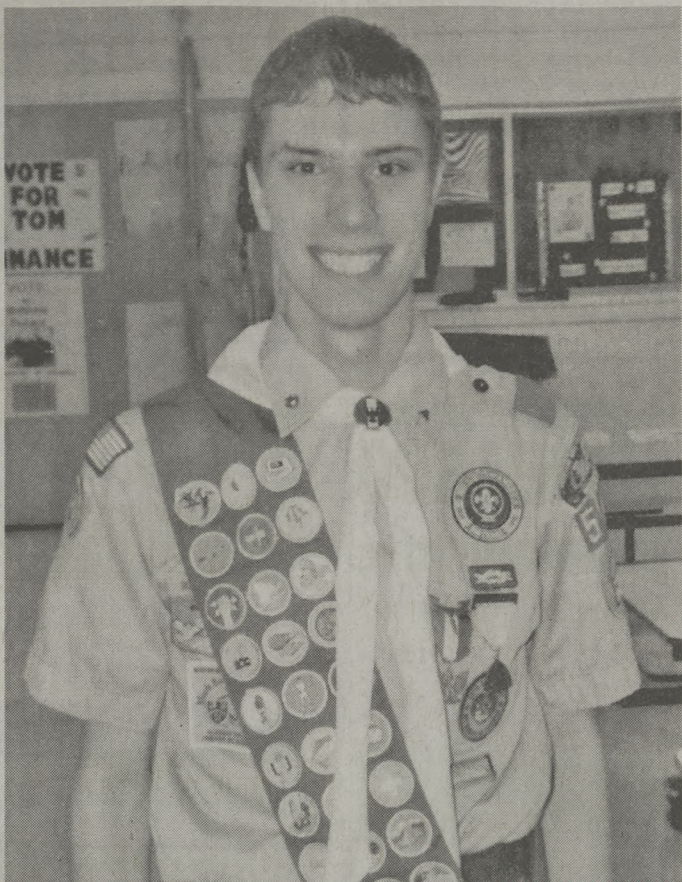

The following Wilmington

residents were inducted into Foreign Language Honor Societies:

Nicholas DeRienzo, sophomore, Sociedad Honoraria Hispanica

Elizabeth McDermott, sophomore, Soci  t   Honoraire de Francais

Marisa Melanson, sophomore, Sociedad Honoraria Hispanica

From Tennessee to Massachusetts Jessa's story: How a North Reading veterinarian saved a dog's life

By RYAN LAROCHE

For every villain in society, there is a hero. Everyone needs a hero. Everything needs a hero. Sometimes it's humans, other times it's animals, both large and small.

Sometimes a hero goes completely unnoticed.

Nearly four years ago, someone or some people shot a dog named Dory (for reasons unknown) with a tranquilizer dart in Tennessee. Today, thanks to the assistance of North Reading residents Karen and Alexandra Chipman, and the life-saving surgery performed by Dr. Joan Baruffaldi, Dory, now known as Jessa, is alive and well and preparing to walk with the Chipman family in the MSPCA's Walk for Animals on Sept. 11.

This is the fifth year for the Chipmans and Jessa, but it will have an extra special meaning, as they will walk not only for Jessa, but also for Dr. Baruffaldi who passed away two years ago while on an international veterinary conference in the Virgin Islands.

How does a dog get to Massachusetts from Tennessee?

"Dogs come up from Tennessee frequently," said Karen Chipman, a Stoneham High School graduate and former Reading resident. Especially after Hurricane Katrina, animals have been coming up north from places like Louisiana, she mentioned.

Chipman's daughter, Alexandra, currently attending UNH, found a picture of the dog and after little persuading, convinced her mother to adopt her.

At first, the family believed the dog had a gun shot wound. It wasn't until x-rays later

DR. JOAN BARUFFALDI, WHO HAD A VETERINARY CLINIC IN NORTH READING before she passed away two years ago, performed surgery to remove a tranquilizer dart from Jessa's (the dog) abdomen. On Sept. 11, Jessa, along with her family, the Chipmans, will walk in the MSPCA's Walk For Animals which takes place on Boston Common. Dr. Baruffaldi also helped Jessa overcome heartworms which developed a few months after surgery.

showed that a tranquilizer dart was imbedded in her abdomen. Either way, the family had no reservations about taking Jessa. In fact, the Chipmans already had two other dogs, a cat and a horse. They were clearly an animal loving family.

Once they discovered the problem with Jessa, the family prepared to have the dog sent to the Lab Rescue of Connecticut for surgery.

Jessa to S-4

THIS X-RAY SHOWS THE TRANQUILIZER DART FOUND IMBEDDED IN JESSA'S ABDOMEN. Life-saving surgery by Dr. Joan Baruffaldi and the love and care of the Chipman family from North Reading have kept Jessa alive. The family, along with Jessa, will walk in this year's MSPCA Walk For Animals on Sept. 11 around Boston Common. Jessa, brought north from Tennessee, found a home with the Chipman family of North Reading. Thanks to the life-saving surgery of Dr. Joan Baruffaldi, Jessa is now a happy and healthy 67-pound golden lab.

"CAPTAIN AMERICA" A CLASSIC

"CAPTAIN AMERICA; THE FIRST AVENGER" is a classic movie for all. It focuses on the early days of the Marvel Universe when Steve Rogers (Chris Evans) volunteered to participate in an experimental program that turned him from a scrawny kid into Captain America who can now beat up bullies. There are some great visuals too.

"CAPTAIN AMERICA: THE FIRST AVENGER"
GRADE: ***

Captain America: The First Avenger focuses on the early days of the Marvel Universe, when Steve Rogers (Chris Evans) volunteered to participate in an experimental program that turns him into the Super Soldier known as Captain America. As Captain America, Rogers joins forces with Bucky Barnes (Sebastian Stan) and Peggy Carter (Hayley Atwell) to wage war on the evil HYDRA organization, led by the villainous Red Skull (Hugo Weaving.)

With Captain America, the country has a superhero worth rooting for, and comic book fans have the movie about one of the most iconic characters they have long hoped for.

With its mix of World War II nostalgia, Bam-Kapow comic book values and fight scenes, underdog determination and battle scenes filled with red-white-and-blue pride, "Captain America: The First Avenger" is hands-down the best Marvel superhero picture since the first "Iron Man."

The film mostly exists in it one more try and stops at a recruiting station, where he encounters a scientist, Dr. Abraham Erskine (Stanley Tucci), who's looking for recruits with spirit, not strength.

Dr Erskine specializes in turning regular folks super with the help of a mix of secret serums and high voltage. Erskine's first experiment in his native Germany created a super-strong monster called the Red Skull (Hugo Weaving), the head of Hitler's supernatural division, Hydra.

Soon enough, Steve Rogers receives Erskine's new, improved treatment and becomes Captain America, the ultimate fighting machine.

But instead of sending him off to battle Nazis, the government dresses him up in a costume and sends him on a national tour with chorus girls to raise money.

Eventually our hero makes his way to Europe to do battle with Red Skull.

Once the action gets going, it's some pretty sweet visuals.

The scrawny kid who can now beat up the bullies is classic Marvel stuff, and Captain America is a classic movie for all.

"TRANSFORMERS: DARK OF THE MOON"
GRADE: ***

The first "Transformers" movie was a decent mix of special effects and nostalgia for aging sci-fi fans. The second installment of the series, "Transformers: Revenge of the Fallen" was a waste of time for all involved, including anyone in the audience who purchased a ticket.

The third time appears to be the charm. In "Transformers: Dark of the Moon", director Michael Bay has finally found the right mix of action, humor, and special effects that bring this popular animated series to life on the big screen - and in 3D.

The new movie was made by most of the same people involved with the earlier ones (Megan Fox is gone), and they all have apparently hit their stride with this entry. What was once loud and chaotic has become stripped down, exciting and funny in "Dark of the Moon," which begins by working in actual events in history - it claims that, in addition to being the first men on the moon, Buzz Aldrin and Neal Armstrong were also on a secret mission to investigate the discovery of one of the Transformers ships - and then shifts into a battle for control of Earth between the bad transformers and good transformers, assisted by Shia LaBeouf's character of Sam.

This time Frances McDormand is along for the ride, playing the no-nonsense director of national intelligence.

Julie White and Kevin Dunn return as Sam's bossy parents, along with John Turturro (revealing the half-crazy portrayal of an agent he hinted at in the earlier films. This time the young romance featured is between Sam and Rosie Huntington-Whiteley, replacing Fox.

Even the robots have heart this time, displaying a wide range of emotions even as they are transforming (there's a great sequence when Sam is rescued, in slow motion, by a transformer that turns into a very safe car to rest in).

The film's explosive finale is staged in Chicago, and worth the price of admission. The action in "Dark of the Moon" is clear and it doesn't feel like an assault because it's broken up with humor, romance and a little mystery - exactly what a summer movie should be.

"CARS 2"
GRADE: ***

This high-speed sequel returns most of the original cast, and while the story isn't quite as good as the original, its still a pretty

AA-PLUS IN BURLINGTON

"The Board of Selectmen signed off on about $25.5 million in bonds and bond anticipation notes ... as town officials took the opportunity to tout Burlington's financial position and the low interest rates for financing infrastructure projects," notes the Burlington edition of the "Daily Times Chronicle."

"In all, $12.2 million in bonds and $13,326,000 in one-year bond anticipation notes, which will be converted to bonds next year, were finalized by the selectmen.

"The bonds are being financed at an interest rate of 3.8 percent, while the notes have a net interest cost of .3 percent. There were seven bidders in each category.

the existing middle school being reutilized for recreational and park uses.

"The Building Committee last May selected the Central School as the preferred site for a new middle school that would serve pupils in grades 5 through 8. The town officials had also considered attaching a new building to the high school, but ultimately nixed that idea after realizing that traffic backups would be greatly exacerbated there during morning and afternoon drop-off and pick-up times.

"Proponents of the preferred option argued that it would cost an estimated $7 million less than a middle school off of Franklin Street, while also filling out excess capacity at the remaining elementary schools by housing pupils in the first through fourth grades there..."

"What I would like is a motion from this board to allow the Building Committee and the designers to look at it," said Rotondi. "It would still have to go before Town Meeting, and the transfer would occur at that time. This just gives them more flexibility..."

TRANSPARENCY IN TEWKSBURY

"During the School Committee meeting, Superintendent of Schools Dr. John O'Connor offered clarification regarding recent media reports about the potential scandal at the Merrimac Education Collaborative (MEC). The collaborative - a group of ten towns and a technical school - has come under fire for possible financial mismanagement.

"He noted that several newspapers were not entirely clear in their reporting of the situation, as they had listed MEC and the Merrimack Special Education Collaborative - MEC's counterpart, as one organization. This was incorrect: both groups are separate.

"O'Connor said there are multiple investigations taking place and he will work to keep Tewksbury abreast of any changes taking place. He wants to work with the town and the school community to make sure those concerned are informed...he said, those involved are still in the process of gathering information and piecing it together."

good time at the movies.

One part of "Cars 2" that works well is the fact that it's less NASCAR and more of an action-adventure.

It's a fun movie. The usual brilliance in animation comes out in this film, as "Cars 2" takes the virtual camera along for the ride.

Combined that with the 3D presentation, and this movie is a thrill to watch.

"Cars 2" is harmless and fun. It's not the best movie Pixar has churned out - not even close - but it is fun to watch, and the kids will love it.

Life Changing Weight Loss in 4 Months

When I began my weight loss journey at Get In Shape for Women, I was feeling pretty hopeless about ever looking good again. My weight had been slowly creeping up in my late 30's, despite several attempts at different exercise programs. I was tired and more importantly I looked and felt terrible. I lost 3 pounds my very first week and I haven't looked back since. I have lost 45 pounds in 4 months and I'm so happy with the way I look but most importantly with the confidence I've regained.

•Need some help with the trivia question? The initials of one of the players is M.J.

•SAMMY MACY, a 2011 graduate from TEWKSBURY, MASS., received the 2010-11 Honda Division II Athlete of the Year award at the Collegiate Women's Sports Awards (CWSA) press conference recently at Columbia University's Low Memorial Library.

Macy was honored with Division I recipient Maya Moore, a standout on the University of Connecticut basketball team (who accepted her award via satellite); and Kendra Stern, a standout swimmer at Amherst College.

With the award, Honda will donate $5,000 toward UMass Lowell's women's athletic programs. Macy was presented the award by ESPN Sportscenter anchor and host Sage Steele.

"Winning this award is definitely an amazing feeling," Macy said at the press conference. "I never thought I would actually win it. Being nominated was amazing as it is and to win it is unbelievable. There are so many phenomenal female athletes in Division II, and to represent them here today is just unreal."

Macy was named the Honda/CWSA Division II recipient on June 15 out of a field of 11 finalists each in different sports. She is the first-ever Division II student-athlete from the Northeast-10 Conference, New England or East Region to receive the award, and is also the first field hockey player to earn the distinction in the CWSA program's 24 years of honoring Division II athletes.

Macy was joined at the ceremony by her family as well as head coach Shannon Hlebichuk and director of athletics Dana Skinner.

"Sammy's name is synonymous with passion, pride and perseverance," said Hlebichuk. "She has truly embraced the game of field hockey and her involvement off the field has been remarkable."

Perhaps UMass Lowell's greatest player, Macy enjoyed a storied career in which she emerged the program's all-time leading scorer as a junior, and capped her career with 91 goals and 38 assists (220 points).

Macy was among the catalysts of UMass Lowell's 2010 season which saw the River Hawks post a 24-0 record and capture their second NCAA Championship in six years with a 1-0 triumph over Shippensburg University.

Macy scored a single season record 30 goals and dished out 14 assists and led Division II in points per game with 3.17. She scored two or more goals in eight games, notched three hat tricks and peaked with five goals in a 6-0 win at Indiana (Pa.).

"Sammy not only led the team in scoring for three straight years, but she is also second among all-time assist leaders," Hlebichuk noted. "She is not just a finisher, but a smart playmaker and a selfless teammate - a rare combination."

A three-time All-American, Macy led UMass Lowell to a four-year record of 81-14 (.853 winning percentage) which included appearances in four straight NCAA championship games. Additionally, the River Hawks captured the NE-10 Tournament in 2007 and 2010 as well as the NE-10 regular season in 2007, 2008 and 2010.

Perhaps most impressive, Macy came back from anterior cruciate ligament tears in 2008 and 2009. "She never came back the same player," said Hlebichuk. "She always came back even stronger. She put in whatever time and effort was necessary to rehab her knee. She never complained once."

Macy has also been an exemplary student and leader on campus. She graduated with a 3.12 in criminal justice, and has been involved in community service efforts such as Kids Night Out and Bowling for Wishes among many other initiatives.

A 2007 graduate of Tewksbury H.S., Macy is the daughter of Doug and Mary Macy of Tewksbury, Mass. Macy has been a Town Crier Female Athlete of the Year and was a finalist for the Town Crier's Female Athlete of the Decade.

•ANSWER TO THIS WEEK'S TRIVIA QUESTION: Michael Jordan and Bill Russell.

Jessa

From S-1

Unfortunately, the lab said they couldn't support the dog and wouldn't do the surgery. Sadly, the lab never even saw Jessa, merely making their decision based off her injuries and surgery needs.

"I think it's fishy," Karen said about the lab's decision. "I think a lot of these rescue shelters are bogus."

Left with a severely injured, not to mention 37 pound, golden lab, the Chipman family seemed out of luck. Thankfully, all was not lost. Alexandra happened to work for Dr. Baruffaldi at her veterinary clinic in North Reading on Main Street. Once Dr. Baruffaldi found out Jessa had been rejected by the lab in Connecticut, she agreed to do the surgery.

Originally, the doctor saw Jessa and observed her to be fine, albeit underweight. Eventually, the dog began to gain weight, but Dr. Baruffaldi noticed her wounds weren't healing. That's when she called for the x-ray that revealed the tranquilizer dart.

Karen called the dog "skin and bones" when she first saw her. She also said the dog had clearly been abused, pointing out a cigarette burn mark on her body.

When she was first found, Jessa had a collar around her neck. However, when contacted, the owners said they had given Jessa away. Karen never found out who they gave her to.

At first, the surgery was going to cost thousands of dollars, but fortunately Dr. Baruffaldi agreed to do it for free.

"That's just the kind of woman she was," Karen said, referring to the doctor's heart. "She's always helped abandoned animals."

Thankfully, the surgery went off without a hitch and the dart was safely removed. Dr. Baruffaldi saved Karen and her daughter from doing something they weren't emotionally prepared to do: put Jessa to sleep.

Although they hadn't known each other long, Jessa took to the mother and daughter very quickly. Unfortunately, most likely to do with past abuse, the dog didn't take to others so fast. Karen said she would run away when other people came around.

On Sept. 11, Jessa has a good reason to run, as she will join the Chipman family in the MSPCA Walk for Animals. It's a short walk around Boston Common, so nothing too taxing for the golden lab from Tennessee.

According to the MSPCA website, "There will be plenty of activities during the day to entertain both dogs and their two-footed friends. On-site entertainment will include: prizes, food, contests, microchipping, behavior demonstrations, agility, kid's corner activities, crafts, music and more!"

Over the past four years, Team Jessa has been in the top 10 fundraising teams. This year they hope to do even better. Currently, they sit at number two having raised $545. Their goal, said Karen, is $2,000.

The first year the team had a lot of walkers. It tapered off the next couple years, but now Karen said she hoped for 50. For anyone wishing to donate to Team Jessa, please visit the MSPCA website and Team Jessa's page at http://support.mspca.org/site/TR/WalkforAnimals/General?team_id=12992&pg=team&fr_id=1370.

For those wishing to send a check, please make it out to MSPCA Walk for Animals and mail to: MSPCA Walk for Animals, 350 South Huntington Ave., Boston, MA 02130. If the donation is for a specific individual or team, please make a note of that, i.e. Team Jessa.

So far, the team has found 11 sponsors. They include: Docs Petland, Dicaras Deli, Eastgate Liquors, Advanced Photo, K-9 Performance, Grasshopper Irrigation, Shasha, Ruff and Ready Grooming, Flying High Stables, Grooming Unlimited, and North Reading Boarding and Grooming.

About Dr. Baruffaldi, Team Jessa had this to say: "Joan was an extremely selfless woman who put her patients and her clients first. She treated all animals under her care with love and compassion while treating their owners with the very same kindness. Joan was not only a doctor to many animals, but she was also a loving friend to every client going above and beyond your typical vet."

Thanks to Dr. Baruffaldi, Jessa now leads a normal life. In fact, she may even lead somewhat of a charmed life, as not only did she survive having a tranquilizer dart imbedded in her abdomen, she also survived having heartworms just a couple months after her surgery.

For Jessa, Massachusetts must feel like Heaven. Fortunately, for the Chipman family, Jessa has many more years to live.

Get the best price when selling a home

The housing market has not yet rebounded to pre-recession prices, when buyers seemed to be stepping over one another to bid up the price of homes. Today's sellers may be lucky to get asking price, with the reality being a certain percentage below. However, that doesn't mean sellers should accept bottom-of-the-barrel offers. There are still ways to get the best price possible on an offered home.

With sellers hoping to get the most possible for a home and buyers interested in spending the least, it's sometimes a battle of wills when it comes to hashing out a confirmed price in the world of real estate. Sellers who wonder whether they'll struggle to get a good offer can hedge their bets in the right direction by employing a few strategies.

 What you see is what you get: It's difficult to change first impressions. If a potential buyer pulls up to a home that doesn't give them "warm and fuzzy" feelings immediately, it may be hard to eventually sway opinion of the home - even if it's pristine on the inside. Individuals do judge a book by its cover, which means that effort should be put into making a home's exterior as appealing as possible. Landscaping should be neat and lush. There shouldn't be any obstacles leading to the front of the home. Items that look in disrepair should be mended. Curb appeal does matter.

 Use a real estate agent: Many people forgo this step, thinking they can sell their home just as well without an agent and not have to pay commission in the process. A real estate agent is schooled in the process of negotiating the price of an offered home. In fact, the more a home's selling price, the higher the agent's profit. That's incentive right there. Furthermore, agents know the average prices of similar homes and can help a seller price and market a property correctly. That may add up to a faster sale (and a better offer).

 Price it competitively: Some sellers think the higher they price their home the more money they'll get for it. The fact is, the longer an overpriced home sits on the market, the less appealing it will appear to buyers. Individuals looking for a home may repeatedly see the listing and wonder what's wrong with the home. Even if it's the best home in the neighborhood, it may be seen as a red flag that's best avoided.

 Give people what they want: Buyers often prefer updated kitchens and bathrooms. Most buyers out there are not looking for "handyman specials." They want a relatively turn-key property. A kitchen or bathroom that is an eyesore can repel potential buyers. Home shoppers may be more inclined to go closer to asking price if some of the bigger-ticket items are already completed.

 Don't be an open book: If a buyer knows that time is of the essence or the home is "priced to sell," he or she may sense that desperation, almost guaranteeing a low-ball offer. Sellers shouldn't let on too much about their reasons for selling or make it seem like they'll be in dire straights if the home doesn't sell quickly. Selling a home under duress is not likely to cause prospective buyers to pony up.

 Don't be afraid to counter-offer: A buyer who is excited to get an offer on a home in a slow market, but feels the offer is below value, should definitely counter-offer. While the buyer may not accept the counter, he or she may make another offer that is more to the seller's liking.

Rents higher, apartments scarcer in Boston-area

BOSTON (AP) — Finding an apartment in the Boston-area can be a difficult — and expensive — proposition these days.

The Boston Globe reports that the median rent has reached a record high of $1,665 a month, while the vacancy rate is as low as its been in a decade. The Globe cites figures from Reis, Inc., a New York-based company that tracks rents.

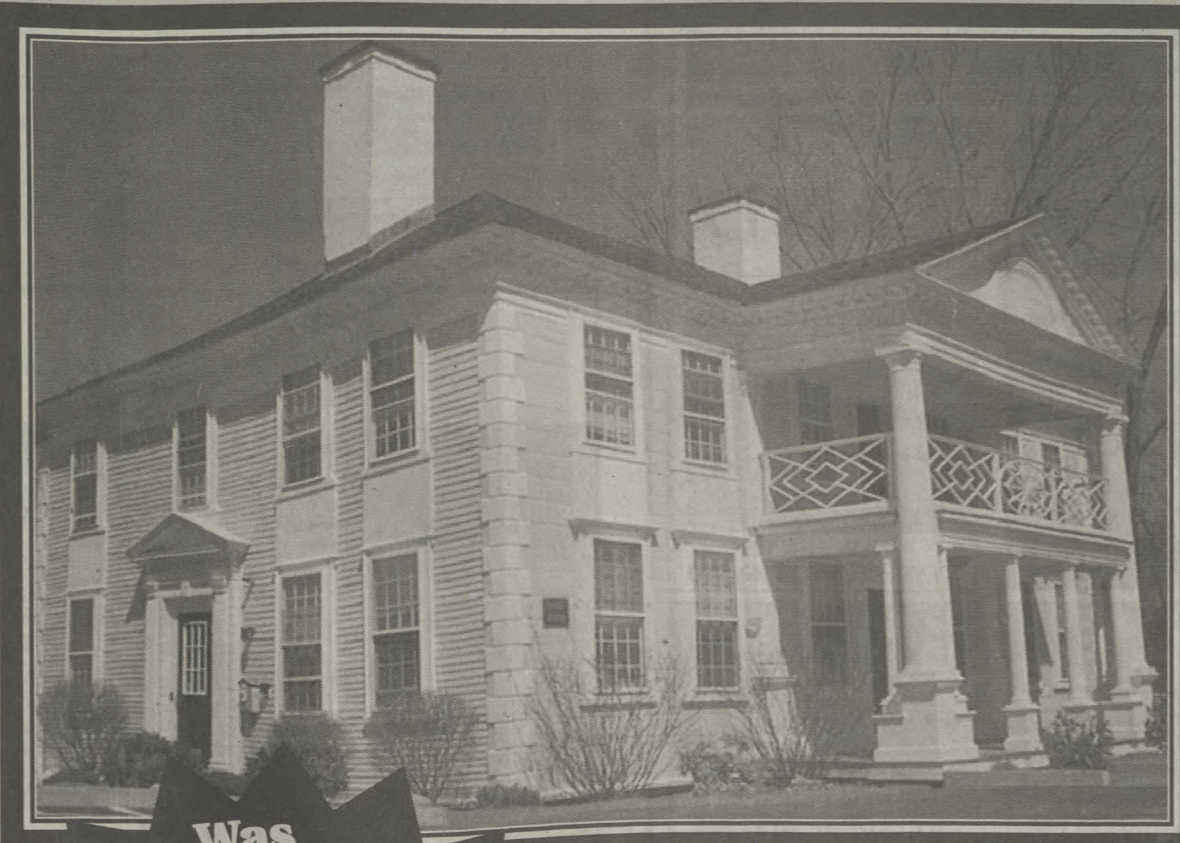

The combination of high rents and low inventory are putting the squeeze on students and other people trying to line up an apartment for Sept. 1. Some are being forced to grab units sight unseen.

Experts say there are several factors in play, including the foreclosure crisis which has forced many former homeowners into apartments. The Boston-area has also seen a large increase in graduate students seeking rental housing.
